

Plans under way for GCAA's 32nd triennial reunion

Plans are now under way for the 32nd Triennial Reunion of the Gallaudet College Alumni Association.

Scheduled for June 20-23 on campus, the reunion will include the dedication of the Hall of Fame and the opening ceremony for the museum at Chapel Hall.

In addition to attending business meetings and seminars, alumni will meet with Gallaudet President Jerry C. Lee for a program entitled "If I Were President..." in which alumni can make suggestions and ask questions of Lee.

A golden anniversary breakfast will be held for members of the Class of 1935 and a variety show — "A World of Our Own" — will conclude the reunion.

Approximately 400 alumni and guests attended the last Triennial Reunion in 1982. Anyone interested in serving on a reunion committee should contact Mary Anne Pugin at x5105 (TDD) or x5277 (voice).

Conference for female students set for Feb. 22-23

A conference for female students at Gallaudet — the first meeting of its kind on campus — will be sponsored later this month by the Women's Advocacy and Resources Network.

The two-day conference, scheduled for Feb. 22 and 23 at Ely Center, will focus on the theme "D-Day: A Day for Defining Yourself." Several deaf women will be on hand to discuss lifestyles and characteristics of women in management, education and other professions. They will also help students identify personal strengths and weaknesses.

WARN, a committee made up of Student Affairs staff members and students, was formed two years ago. It has sponsored women's fairs and various programs for female students in the past.

For more information about the upcoming conference, contact any one of the following committee members: Alice Sykora (Student Union), Norma Buemi (Student Affairs), Ginny Cowgell (Counseling and Placement Center), Jodee Crace (Office of Student Development), Shelley Fields (Counseling and Placement Center), Lori Kronick (Student Life, Krug Hall), Marsha Miceli (Student Life), Pat Duncan (senior peer adviser) or Evon Black (vice president-elect of the Student Body Government).

College receives over 40 entries for second Gallaudet Journalism Award

The College has received more than 40 entries for the second annual Gallaudet Journalism Award, with writers from both major and hometown newspapers and magazines submitting articles for consideration.

The award, sponsored by the College and the Gallaudet College Alumni Association, was initiated last year to recognize excellence in reporting and writing on topics which involve deafness and the lives of deaf people.

The work of reporters and writers employed by U.S. wire services, newspapers or magazines of general circulation are eligible for the award. Articles must have appeared for the first time between January and December 1984.

Gallaudet alumni and employees of the College are ineligible for the award, as are publications of the College.

To date, 42 entries have been received from newspapers such as The Washington Post and The Los Angeles Times and from magazines such as Good Housekeeping and Woman's Day.

The awards will be presented during the Triennial Reunion of the Gallaudet College Alumni Association in June. One writer or reporter will receive a $500 cash award and certificate for the best non-fiction article of 2,000 words or more and another writer or reporter will be presented a $200 cash award and certificate for the best non-fiction work of under 2,000 words.

The first Gallaudet Journalism Award was presented to Teresa Hoffman Greenley of the Pensacola News for a series entitled "A Sign of Independence."

Honorable mention was awarded to Anne Fadiman of LIFE magazine for her article "Love in a Silent World" and also to Gill Chamblin for "World of the Deaf," which appeared in the Columbia Flier, a weekly newspaper in Columbia, MD.

Last year's jury was chaired by Jack Gannon, author of "Deaf Heritage: A Narrative History of Deaf America" and executive director of the Office of Alumni Relations and Advancement.

Also serving on last year's jury were: Beryl Lieff Benderly, author of "Dancing Without Music: Deafness in America;" Alan B. Crammatte, who edits a section of the American Annals of the Deaf and who held the Powrie V. Doctor Chair of Deaf Studies in 1983; William B. Dickinson, Jr., general manager and editorial director of the Washington Post Writers Group and former editor of Congressional Quarterly Inc; Robert Farrell, Washington bureau chief of McGraw-Hill World News/Business Week and a former president of the National Press Club; and Robert Gorski, editor of Disabled USA, a magazine published by the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, and president of Handicapped Unlimited of Northern Virginia.

Call leads to arrest

An anonymous call to the Department of Safety and Security led to the arrest late last month of a juvenile attempting to break into a vehicle on campus.

The youth was arrested by campus police the evening of Jan. 26 in the upper level of the Field House parking lot.

The Department of Safety and Security received a call reporting that

Employee teaches art of Hapkido

Some come because they want to learn about the martial arts. Others come because they want to learn about meditation. Others come because they want to learn how to defend themselves.

Whatever their reasons, 30 men and women gather each Wednesday evening at KDES to learn the art of Hapkido, a soft style martial art taught by a member of Gallaudet's Physical Plant.

Ben Stockett, who has studied Hapkido for 27 years, began offering instruction to faculty, staff and students in 1980, one year after he started working at Gallaudet as a maintenance mechanic. He started with one student the first year and has watched the class grow in size each consecutive year.

Stockett, who offers the class free of charge to persons at least 18 years of age, says he decided to give lessons as a way of giving something back to the College. "When I started working here, I noticed the men and women in (the Physical Plant) were more than workers. There was a prevailing spirit of making Gallaudet comfortable and home-like. I felt like I should contribute in some small way," he explains.

The result was a weekly class in Hapkido, which is Korean for "coordination of mind and body." It is an art at least 2,000 years old with 3,286 different movements.

The two-hour class is geared to the needs of the students, with Stockett working with students from the beginner to advanced levels. Each class begins with warm-up exercises which are followed by a demonstration of new movements, practice, meditation and concluding exercises.

Stockett, who also teaches Hapkido in Annapolis and at Prince George's Community College in Largo, MD, has trained five black belts at Gallaudet over the last five years. In December, the first Gallaudet student will receive a first degree in black belt in Hapkido.

While Stockett plans to continue the class, he is now developing a self-defense course for students and faculty and Gallaudet.
